

NINETEEN EIGHTY

MASSASOIT
COMMUNITY COLLEGE

There are places I'll remember all my life
though some have changed.
Some forever not for better, some have gone
and some remain
All these places had their moments with lovers and friends I still can recall.
Some are dead and some are living,
In my life I've loved them all.

But of all these friends and lovers
there is no one compares with you
And these mem'ries lose their meaning
When I think of love as something new,
Though I know I'll never lose affection
for people and things that went before.
I know I'll often stop and think about them.
In my life I'll love you more.

Though I know I'll never lose affection
for people and things that went before
I know I'll often stop and think about them,
In my life I'll love you more.
In my life I'll love you more.

The namesake of this college, Massasoit, was born within the present boundaries of Massachusetts in 1580. His tribe, the Wampanoags, were located throughout the regions of Bristol, Rhode Island, and Massachusetts. The Wampanoags, who had at one time numbered several thousand, had almost been destroyed by an epidemic just before the arrival of the "Mayflower."

In March of 1621, an Indian appeared in Plymouth, and surprised the Pilgrims by speaking to them in English. He was Samoset, and had come to arrange a meeting between the Governor of Plymouth, William Bradford, and the Chief of the Wampanoags, Massasoit. A week later a treaty of peace was signed by the two men, a treaty which held without violation for fifty-four years.

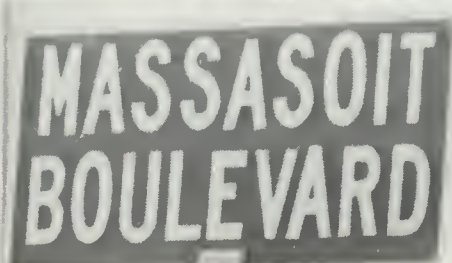

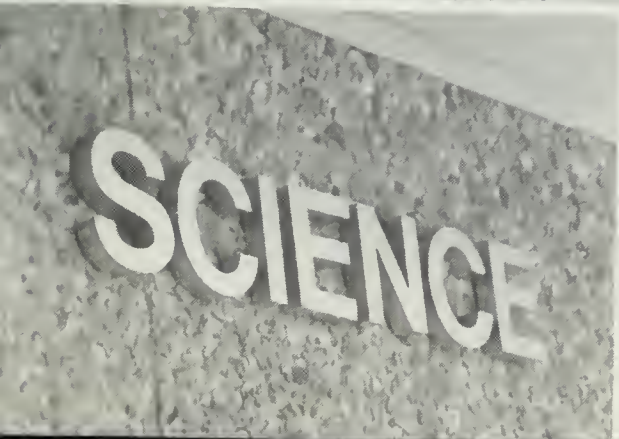

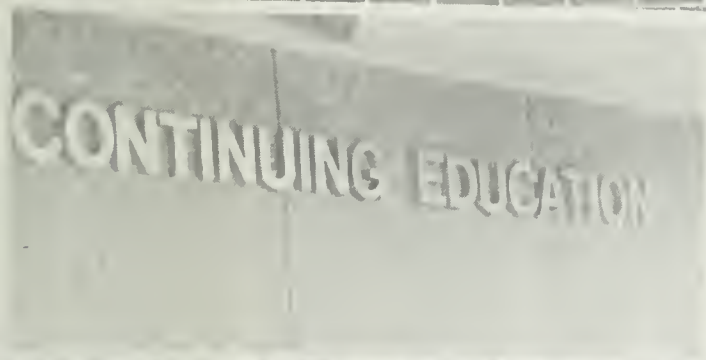

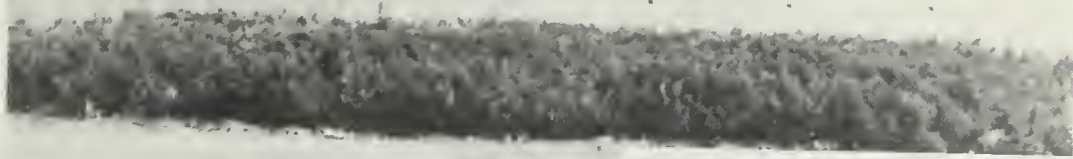

In 1623, Massasoit became ill and was visited by Edward Winslow who effected a cure. In return, Massasoit revealed that a neighboring tribe was to make an attack on the white men.

All through his reign as chief, Massasoit made a practice of living in harmony with the colonists. A writer of the period said of him:

"He was a chief renowned more in peace than in war, and was, as long as he lived, a friend to the English, even as they committed repeated usurpations upon his land and liberties."

Little is known about the chief from 1649, when he sold the site of Duxbury to the English, until his death in 1662.

In order to make this yearbook available to students by graduation, an early deadline was necessary.

In view of this fact, a list of DCE students eligible for graduation was not available.
